

DURABLE PEACE PROGRAMME (DPP)

WHERE WE WORK

Over 100,000 people were displaced in Kachin during the 2011 conflict between the Myanmar Armed Forces and the Kachin Independence Army. Even with the ongoing peace process, internally displaced persons (IDPs) still can't return to their homes as armed conflicts continue. Peace and support for conflict-affected communities remains critical, thus Oxfam's DPP continue to work in 12 townships in Kachin, to help achieve just and lasting peace.

THE CHANGE WE WANT

The long-term goal of DPP is to support peace, reconciliation, rehabilitation and development across 12 townships in Kachin. This will be achieved through a multi-faceted approach, supporting communities and civil society to lead this change, while engaging authorities to be more responsive to community needs.

THE CHALLENGE WE ARE FACING

Because of the volatile situation in Kachin, more people will be displaced, increasing humanitarian needs, and limiting CSOs' access to many areas. This only reinforces the importance of DPP, as we seek to support sustainable peace and equitable development.

THE PEOPLE WE WANT TO REACH

DPP will reach over 85,000 conflict-affected people over three and a half years, with a particular focus on IDPs, especially women and youth.

HOW WE PLAN TO BRING CHANGE

We support women and men so that they will have greater awareness of their rights and responsibilities, increased capacity, and motivation to participate in key peace and development processes. We support civil society in their crucial role in peace-building, and raise the voices of women and men of all ethnicities in Kachin. We engage with officials of the Myanmar Government and Kachin Independence Organisation so that they will have better understanding of the needs and priorities of people living in Kachin, especially the IDPs.

PROJECT IMPLEMENTATION

To reach some of the most remote and challenging areas in Kachin, we implement our work through a consortium of 7 national and international organizations, and 18 local CSOs. Each has its own unique expertise, helping us achieve our goals on peace, reconciliation, rehabilitation, and development in this state.

OUR PARTNERS

Kachin Baptist Convention, Karuna Mission Social Solidarity, Metta Development Foundation, Nyein Foundation, SwissAid and Trocaire, and 18 other local CSOs.

OUR DONOR

DPP is funded through a grant from the European Commission.
